

THE Hollywood REPORTER

STYLE

Hollywood Skin Experts Advise How to Repair Sun Damage After Summer Break

9:45 AM PDT 9/15/2019 by Elycia Rubin

For those who are laser-shy, non-invasive light-absorbing cosmetic cream treatments such as Allumera ($550 with a series of three suggested every four weeks), activated by an LED light or V-beam laser, also effectively treat UV-damaged cells and fine lines. “What I love about Allumera is that it yields little to no downtime, generates new collagen growth, brightens the skin, and improves sun damage. ... Patients will see the crepey-ness and quality of their skin, particularly around the eyes, improved,” claims family nurse practitioner Jennifer Hollander of AuraSpa Healing Center, the Beverly Hills holistic medical center she oversees alongside cosmetic surgeon Dr. Ben Talei (who is said to be responsible for the more realistic look of Kylie Jenner’s lips).

Jennifer Hollander, Nurse Practitioner of AuraSpa Healing

